

Coping with anxiety

Feeling anxious can happen when we feel nervous, frightened, or uneasy about something such as starting a new school, waiting for exam results or friendship issues.

It's perfectly normal to feel this way from time to time, as it's our body's natural response to a situation we are not comfortable with. But sometimes our anxiety gets the better of us and it can start getting in the way of the things we enjoy.

We've shared some advice below.

Name it to tame it

It can be useful to know how anxiety shows up for you. It might be, for example, that you get butterflies in your stomach, or feel sweaty or tongue-tied. In these moments, it can be useful to say (aloud or in your head) 'oh, hello anxiety, you're here to let me know you think something might threaten me – thank you'.

Remind yourself of when you've overcome anxiety in the past

Think back to a time when you've felt anxious about something, but eventually overcame these feelings. For example, if you're feeling anxious about returning to school after the weekend, think back to a time you overcame these feelings by going to school. It can sometimes help by saying something like "thanks anxiety, but I've got this!"

Tell a friend or a grown up

Think about whether you can tell a friend, or a grown up at home or school. Everyone experiences anxiety from time to time and people are there to help you, so it's important to reach out and connect with others. It could be good to share things that help you to feel less anxious – and even to practise some of them together.

Keep a diary

If you're feeling anxious, it can sometimes be helpful to write some of your feelings down in a diary or on your phone. Make notes of things that you find helpful, or things that seem to make you feel worse.

Get active

When we feel anxious, our bodies get ready to cope with something that may threaten us. This is called the 'fight or flight' response. Our hearts beat faster, we sweat more, and our muscles become tense. To release these feelings, it often helps do something active. You may want to go for a walk, play football with friends, or go swimming.

Practise strategies that work well for you

Try different strategies that may help you to manage your anxiety. Finding and practising what works best for you can help reduce your anxiety quicker.

If you have tried these tips and still feel overwhelmed by your anxiety, then it is important to tell you parent or carer and to ask whether you need to get a GP appointment.
